

Millennials Fostering Peace in Bogotá, Colombia Awarded Grant from The Coca-Cola Company

“Bakongo Paz” Named Grand Prize Winner of Annual “Coca-Cola Shaping a Better Future Grant Challenge”

DAVOS, Switzerland--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- A summer camp created by millennials to foster peace and reconciliation in conflict-torn areas of Colombia was awarded the Grand Prize of the 2016 “Coca-Cola Shaping a Better Future Grant Challenge.” The camp project, known as “Bakongo Paz”, was developed by the members of the Global Shapers Community, a network of young people around the world organized by the World Economic Forum. It was one of five social programs receiving $10,000 each in acceleration funding from The Coca-Cola Company.

The facility, known as Camp Bakongo, serves at-risk and underprivileged children who have been impacted by conflict in Colombia.

Young Colombians and demobilized people cooperatively staff and manage the camp. Camp Bakongo creates an environment of peacebuilding, sharing and teamwork that gives the next generation of Colombians a foundation for continued cooperation.

The Coca-Cola Shaping a Better Future Grant Challenge provides acceleration funding to initiatives led by the Global Shapers Community of the World Economic Forum. The grant awards five $10,000 grants to accelerate the most promising and impactful projects.

Daniel Buriticá Córdoba, Global Shaper of the Bogotá Hub and Project Lead for “Bakongo Paz,” said, “One of the main challenges for our country is to restore the social fabric that has been broken after more than five decades of conflict. We are aware that we, the youth, have to take a step forward and send a clear message to our society that, despite all the wounds and pain, it is possible to reconcile and peacefully coexist. Being selected as a Coca-Cola Shaping a Better Future Grant Challenge Grand Prize Winner is deeply inspiring for the Bogotá Hub. This recognition opens the door to fulfilling our short-term dream: offering an improved and strengthened version of ‘Bakongo Paz’ in 2017.”

Alfredo Rivera, President of Coca-Cola Latin America, said, “The Coca-Cola system is committed to being a strong supporter of Colombian communities. The Global Shapers of Bogotá, Colombia remind us all of the importance of engaging young generations when seeking to create sustainable solutions to the world’s most challenging issues.”

The Bogotá Hub's "Bakongo Paz" project won the popular vote of members of the Global Shapers Community as a Shaping a Better Future finalist, and as Grand Prize Winner by a high-level panel of judges comprised of leaders from the public and private sector.

The Coca-Cola Shaping a Better Future Grant Challenge received over 100 project submissions this year from Global Shapers Hubs around the world. In addition to Grand Prize Winner Bogotá, four other Hubs were selected as 2016 Winners:

- Ahmedabad, India, "Shaping Education" – Providing alternative education options for marginalized youth in India.
- Ho, Ghana, "The Water Purification Project (WPP)" – Improving access to sustainable, clear drinking water in Ghana.
- Joinville, Brazil, "Politize!" – Improving political and civic education through fun, interactive online games for schoolchildren in Brazil.
- Uyo, Nigeria, "Education for Sustainable Development" – Building libraries and increasing access to reading materials and education for youth in Nigeria.
