Script for initial calls

Thank you. I'm calling on behalf of David Winters and Wintergreen Advisers in regard to Coca Cola. As you've probably seen in the media, Wintergreen wrote recently to Coca Cola's board and to Warren Buffet to express its concerns about the executive compensation plan proposed in Coke's proxy.

Since we're nearing Coca-Cola's annual meeting, David has decided to provide details of Wintergreen's analysis of Coke's plan on a conference call and presentation tomorrow at noon, New York time. A limited number of seats are available for the call, so I'm contacting you to extend an invitation to the executive in charge of your firm's proxy voting and the executive responsible for your Coke investment.

Participants will be able to access the call via a Website that will display the presentation as David discusses Wintergreen's analysis of Coke's plan. Alternatively, participants can call in on a listen-only phone line. Both require a password, which will be sent with the invitation and sign-in details.

Who will be on the call?

Invitations are going out to institutional investors, including institutions that have holdings in Coke. The call will also be open to analysts and the media.

Why is Wintergreen holding the call? They've already made the letter public, and it's been discussed extensively in the media.

Wintergreen believes that details of its analysis may be of interest to other fiduciaries. Wintergreen believes that the compensation plan described in the proxy will have an important impact on the long-term performance of Coke stock, with consequences for a wide range of institutions and individuals. As you know, Coke is a significant holding in thousands of funds found in the retirement portfolios of millions of Americans. Public pension plans for teachers, firefighters, police and other government workers hold more than $3 billion of Coke stock.

Will we be able to ask questions?

Yes, if you participate via the Web site, you'll be able to send questions to David via a chat screen, and he'll try to answer as many as he can in the time available. Those dialing in by phone will not be able to ask questions during the call but Wintergreen is happy to respond to questions via email afterwards.

Will participants be identified?

No participants will be identified, nor will the names of those sending in questions be used in responses during the call.
